

SCHOOL DAYS ENDED

Business High Pupils Are Graduated.

TWO ADDRESSES DELIVERED

Mr. Cox, Vice President Board of Education, Compliments Class on Its Achievement—Representative Carlin Admonishes the Graduates Not to Strive to Be Models.

Surrounded with banks of palms and roses and showered with congratulations of relatives and friends, 127 young men and women were graduated yesterday afternoon from the Washington Business High School at the National Theater. Nine of the graduates were four-year students.

W. V. Cox, vice president of the board of education, presided. Rev. Dr. Woodrow, pastor of the First Congregational Church, delivered the invocation. Charles C. Carlin made an address to the graduates. T. Stuart, superintendent of public schools, awarded the scholarships and prizes. Dr. Barton W. Evermann, member of the board of education, awarded the diplomas. Allan Davis, principal of the Business High School; Dean Wilbur, of George Washington University; and Arthur C. Houghton, president of the Alumni Society of Business High, were seated on the stage. Music was furnished by the Marine Band.

Following the invocation, Mr. Cox spoke to the graduates as follows:

I congratulate you on your success, and give credit to you for your individual and class work and the work of your able instructors. Did it ever occur to any of you that you would not, as a school, have achieved the success that you have this year were it not for the hard work of the teachers?

When the present board took charge of the school, it found many things to be improved. In looking over the high schools we found that the standing of the Business High somewhat resembled the standing of the Washington baseball club.

After studying the situation, it reached the conclusion that the school was not doing its proper work, as it was forced to accept the standard of the other schools. It was made what it should be, and it was made to do the work of a high school.

Protests came in its usual, from pupils and parents, which, following its rule, it carefully noted and awaited results.

Has there been any improvement in athletics? Is there any one present who has not recently heard of Company B? What an honor to be the first winners for your school in the competitive drills between these splendid companies of High School Cadets!

Has there been any improvement in athletics? How about that baseball team? No longer in the class with the Nationals, but cup winners and school champions in 1909.

The board of education hopes, and expects, the same success to attend you in real life as has attended you during the last year of your school life.

Models Not Wanted.

"Do not try to be models" was the advice of Representative Carlin, of Virginia. "When I was a boy I felt bad because my parents failed to hold me as a model until I looked up the meaning in the dictionary and discovered it to be a small, cheap imitation of the real thing. Don't be models. Be the real thing. Be genuine and sincere."

"Character is the greatest asset. It is what you are yourself, while reputation is the viewpoint of the world. Cultivate character, and, above all things, strive to be thrifty. Avoid expensive habits and start a bank account as soon as possible."

Following the address, Supt. Stuart awarded the scholarships and prizes. The scholarship to the Washington College of Law was awarded to Miss Caroline P. Graham, with Miss A. J. Cullinan as alternate. This honor carries with it free tuition for three years in the law college. The privilege of competing for the Galt prizes in commercial geography was granted to Miss Winifred Croft and A. Rice, with Miss C. M. Viehmann and L. M. Dean as alternates.

During the summer the two successful candidates are to work up a subject, gathering a full set of specimens and making a report on the topic. Next fall the prizes will be awarded. They are in money, and from the interest on $2,000 worth of 8 per cent bonds, bequeathed four years ago by William Galt to the district for educational purposes. The money is to be equally divided between the Business High School, white, and the Armstrong Manual Training School, colored.

WASHINGTON HERALD BUREAU, 126 South Royal Street, Alexandria, Va., June 21.—Because he is alleged to have said in a recent sermon that gambling is a sin, which will be presented to the jury for consideration.

Just what the jury learned about the alleged gambling was not given out. If there was anything to warrant causing the place to be closed or to make them discontinue it will be embodied in the report of the jury, which will be submitted following the investigation of the criminal cases. The report is awaited with interest.

Within the last few months one of two alleged gambling places were raided, but owing to the lack of evidence adduced when the cases were called in the Police Court the so-called proprietors and players were acquitted. It is hard to obtain a conviction. Judge Bailey is desirous of having the matter thoroughly probed.

Mrs. Cordella Posey, who was found wandering the streets Saturday morning last with the dead body of her eight-month-old baby in her arms, was yesterday afternoon declared to be of unsound mind.

Member of First Posse Lost and His Dead Body Is Found.

Columbus, Ga., June 21.—Intense excitement prevailed here today among both the colored and white communities over the finding of the dead body of William Leonard, a prominent planter in Talbot County, in the house of William Corraiker, a negro, with his heart pierced by a bullet. Corraiker is missing.

Leonard was a member of a posse who invaded the home of a colored preacher last night and took him to the woods near here, with the avowed intention of lynching him, for preaching incendiary doctrines. For some unaccountable reason, Leonard became separated from his companions. A search was instituted, which ended in the finding of the body in Corraiker's home.
